Complacency is like assumption

Helen Maister

In times of struggle and strife, when things get really tough, redundant ways get tossed out the window and human beings are catapulted forward in leaps and bounds. Innovation, cooperation and efficiency are coming up shining.

The last quarter of this year has been frenetic. Many projects that were put on hold during lockdown have been given the green light.

Many equipment and services suppliers to retail have been making up for the time they lost.

Stores are more efficient, more beautiful but, most important, more functional. Every square metre has a plan to ensure ROI.

In our Equipment and Services Buyers Guide 2021, we showcase suppliers who are on top of their game. They have innovation, science and technology on their side. Being considered the top of their game certain criteria have to be fulfilled: service delivery, fair pricing and quality product.

Partnering with these suppliers will ensure your store has the best chance of success, least amount of stress and winning combinations of beauty and efficiency.

Moving right along into 2021

Many retailers who were taking their time getting their e-commerce stores up, now have beautifully integrated apps and online shopping sites. Tech, data and distribution are where I see the biggest growth.

Retailers and manufacturers are using data to plan, order and understand consumer behaviour. Route to market has shifted from the traditional to anything that works. In some cases manufacturers are going straight to distribution and cutting out a good chunk of the supply chain.

Tech is being used to shift buying behaviour. This gives the smaller brands a better chance of getting their product in the hands of the consumer.

Change is afoot

'Change is happening' hasn't got the same Shakespearean drama as 'Change is afoot'. They say time is moving faster now than ever before. What was done in a month by a team of people is now done in a morning in a coffee shop by someone dressed in jeans, takkies (sneakers) and a hoody. Retailers are more aware of consumer needs than ever before and know how to deliver efficiently.

Consumers are loyal to price. At one stage consumers knew that a certain KVI baked bean was quality which for decades drove consumers to purchase that brand. Now many House Brands have upped their game and are being established with great success as consumers become more price sensitive.

2021 will be an interesting year as the playing field shifts further. It's exciting and it keeps you on your toes. We, at Supermarket & Retailer, will continue to inform and bring you serious original content that will support you, the retailer, in all your processes and categories.

Looking forward to this journey with you

In this series of Supermarket & Retailer's articles, we share stories of what some organisations and managers have done to motivate and inspire their teams. We give you practical ideas of what you can do to create the most amazing, customer-driven company in the world.

When my son was about 4-years' old he got a letter from Santa Claus. Well, not really from Santa Claus, but from a young lady who worked in a small toy store in Johannesburg. He had his mind set on a Thomas the Train set, but after exhausting all the big chains and trying online stores to buy this elusive toy without success, we were desperate. The last thing we wanted to do was disappoint him, but just didn't know what to do.

By a pure stroke of luck, we walked into a small independent toy shop, and explained our predicament to the young assistant. She explained that there was no stock in the whole country, but then conspiratorially she leaned forward and whispered: "I'll tell you what I'll do. While the two of you go and look for toys to put under the tree, I'll write him a letter from Santa Claus, and I'll explain that the elves and helpers worked 24/7 to keep up with the demand, but just didn't make it – and then I'll tell him not to worry because Santa is coming back. Then next January when the stock comes in, I'll call you and you can give it to him then."

With a great sense of relief (and, wondering why we didn't think of that), we chose our gifts and returned to pay. By the time we got back her she had produced a beautiful letter.

It won't surprise you to hear that at that store, we not only did buy a few hundred rand of toys that same morning, but went back about four weeks later to spend another R600 for the train set. Ever since, because of that letter from Father Christmas, we have repeatedly returned to that shop to buy presents for birthday parties for other kids in the class. The return on investment of that little letter is probably a few thousand times.

Sometimes it's easy to forget what it means to be human, especially as we get caught up in the problems that we experience every day, but Christmas can bring back the lost spirit of warmth. Today consumers face a perfect storm of rising fuel prices, rampant food inflation, the 'New Covid Economy', power failures and ever-expanding bills, even while retrenchments and employment drop. But Christmas reminds us that there are people worse off than we are, and your business can be a beacon of hope, an oasis of comfort – even in your busiest time of the year.

You can bring joy and offer customers extraordinary experiences that they will appreciate and remember long after these dreadful times are over. All you have to do is look around you and observe what their lives are like. Consumers will never again revere the companies and brands like they used to, but that doesn't mean that you give up trying.

Here are some examples of the things which can make a huge difference – and make people in your business feel good too.

Have you got specific ideas for how you can spread a little love? What is your plan to make sure that every single customer that comes into your business will walk out a little happier than when they came in? By all means, share some little gifts, some tasty little morsels of pleasure, or offer them gift vouchers or even discounts, if your budget can handle it, but also make sure that there is some warmth and a spirit of generosity. Have fun with lucky draws and similar.

Be charitable. You don't have to make donations to charity, and there are other ways to make sure good happens. Help customers save money, and don't forget poor people in your community. Asking your customers to help you with that can make them also feel good about themselves, and they will admire your business too. A good example is 'Barefoot No More' a company that makes and sells flip-flop beach sandals. For every pair that customers buy, they donate a pair of school shoes to a child that doesn't have any. And, if you really don't have any cash reserves, how about 'donating' each member of your staff for a day to assist at a children's home? Look for ways to help them when they are stressed, sick, or are in some other plight. When was the last time someone from your business stopped to help a customer or potential customer broken down on the side of the road?

Get the basics right. This sounds obvious, but shopping is really a hassle in most people's lives. Without day-by-day pressures, customers have time to notice the little things, and these make a huge difference when relationships are being built. But when it is busy, all they want is to get the right products in the right quantities at the right time and at the right price. If this process is disrupted, and we create stress in their lives, we will pay a very heavy price. Are you there when they need you? Is it easy to find things in your business? Can they get in and out quickly? Did they find what they needed? What else can you do to make it easy and effortless? Can you make recommendations based on what you know about them?

Be innovative. What problems and headaches do your customers have that you can help them with? For example, at the end of every month, hundreds of people move house. Instead of letting customers go around begging for boxes, or even worse, having to buy them, you could put them in visible and convenient places – and even offer a surprise discount voucher for stressed customers inside the boxes.

Get clever with technology, social media and apps. As a self-confessed techno-moron, I shouldn't be giving you advice about what technology can do for you, but I do know that it can offer unprecedented convenience – or utter despair. Never mind giving your customers special discounts as soon as they walk into your store, based on what you already know about them. Many companies get to know you and can make recommendations based on that knowledge. But when you already know that this is going to be the busiest time of the year, you'd better make sure that all the technology – including the payment tech from the banks – works.

Be ready for stressed-out employees. We just seem to be unable to get it right every year, but you already know that your people are going to be under pressure. Warn them now, and prepare them emotionally. Paint a picture of how wonderful it could all be if they were positive, and also how great it will be in January when it's time for a break. Give them little rewards and incentives, however small, to put in the extra effort. After all, what does it cost to buy them a cold-drink or a chocolate?

In this challenging economy, if you plan to get loyal customers, business owners and retailers should be able to deliver a 'wow' experience. Despite everything, it is still possible to delight and surprise your customers. As SA economist Azar Jamine states, "Businesses need to wake up to the fact that just making money is an empty goal without contributing to the betterment of life of your fellow human beings."

I couldn't agree more. Don't be a Grinch. SR

Cyber crime risks destroying the gains made over the last year

Brendon Williamson
CSO at DPO South Africa

Online merchants are revelling in the excellent growth of new online customers, driven largely by the Covid pandemic. But while they are making hay, fraudsters are also migrating online and, if left unchecked, these bad actors could destroy the windfall of this new customer acquisition.

Brendon Williamson, CSO at DPO South Africa, looks at the state of digital fraud and advises merchants on how to protect themselves and their customers.

Everyone likes to quantify the cyber fraud problem, and this is certainly useful for tracking purposes. The problem, however, is that the data is inevitably 12 months behind our lived reality and so shifts in trends often go under reported and mostly ignored by the general public. It is very much up to consumers to inform themselves. Merchants, meanwhile, must ensure they are on top of trends, understand their liabilities, and, if they're smart, use the opportunity to better understand their customers' behaviour.

From skimming to stuffing

Before fraudsters upped their game, card skimming was the main payment fraud we would see. You would hand over your card and the criminals would use skimming devices to make a clone of it, copying the details stored in the mag strip on the back of the bank card.

Fortunately we are seeing a decline in this particular type of fraud with fewer counterfeit cards circulating at present. Unfortunately, while the physical card fraud has decreased, card not present fraud is on the rise.

It's worth noting that many South Africans will have their card details stolen and used internationally – especially in places like the United States which doesn't have the added security of 3D Secure, which has proved especially effective in cutting down on online fraud.

In fact, the introduction of 3D Secure and just how effective it has proved has given rise to sophisticated social engineering where the criminals will contact the card holder, posing as their bank, and fast-talk the customer into disclosing their One Time Pin (OTP). The challenge with this type of fraud is that customers are seldom able to seek recourse in these instances as they have handed over their OTPs, despite the many warnings we may have had from our banks.

Another cyber crime that is on the rise is credential stuffing. This year has seen a number of high-profile data breaches, where names and passwords have been acquired from various sites. Since so many of us recycle just a handful of passwords, the fraudsters will use the details they have to attempt to breach other sites. More than this, since they have so much of our information it is easy to impersonate banks or other service providers and dupe you into handing over information they can use to access accounts.

Quantum can help

But for now, it's up to you

One of the big problems when it comes to card fraud is managing false positives. This is when a bank or payment provider monitors behaviour out of the ordinary and incorrectly predicts a possible case of fraud.

Because quantum computers can process huge data sets in a fraction of the time of our regular computers, banks are able to throw much more information into their fraud engines, delivering increased accuracy. This will benefit the entire online ecosystem including merchant and customer. Unfortunately, we are not quite there yet and so for now, the risk lies more often than not, with the banks. What this means, is that managing risk is still a costly affair and of course, these costs get passed on via transaction fees.

From a merchant's point of view, it's important to know as much as you can about your customers. This should be managed carefully, because you don't want to spook first time buyers with overly extensive registration questionnaires, but at the very least get their name and email address.

More than just allowing future communication, profiles allow you to track how customers engage with your site and can prove exceptionally valuable in managing your risk. If a customer is behaving or buying in a way that is very out of the ordinary, merchants can call them to ensure the transaction's bonafides. This better understanding of the customer can also help brands forge a stronger relationship with their patrons, help design targeted digital marketing campaigns as well as assist in better product design and marketing. Knowing your customer is just great business practice all round.

Virtual cards can help

A new addition to the South African digital landscape is the virtual bank card. The ability to create virtual credit cards can help reduce risk for consumers who are wary of sharing their details online.

These digital cards have randomly generated, once off numbers that are associated with your credit card account, but your actual card details are never exposed, keeping you safe even if the merchant's site is compromised. These cards are also a way for customers to manage spending on a shopping spree since they can limit the amount loaded on them.

It's clear that as fast we produce ways to combat fraud, cyber criminals will find new ways of breaching our systems. In this endless game of cat and mouse, it's imperative that the merchant do whatever they can to make their customers feel safe.

All it will take is one bad experience to spook a new online shopper and all the hard work and money spent in gaining them – not to mention the lost future revenue – is lost. It's also a great reason for merchants to partner with a payment service provider who can minimise their daily transactional risk. SR

Kasinomics

The unseen economy

Like the movie the Matrix, the informal economy is invisible, but all around us – like a mist drifting by our car windows, hanging around on street corners, covering the townships. It is growing in an urgent organic pace unmatched by the formal sector.

Consider that ...

- 50 000 kasi kos / informal food takeaways selling everything from the township burger called a kota to vetkoeks, shisanyama's and amaplate food trucks. This sector turns over in excess of R90 billion a year. 200 000+ people are employed in this sector.
- The muti market is worth R18 billion in turnover employing almost 150 000 people and serving 27 million customers.
- 80 000 auto businesses – kasi mechanics, services, panel beating, car wash, tyres, sound systems.
- There are more than 70 000 hole in the wall spaza shops, 30 000 spazarettes (informal supermarkets) and cash&carries turning over more than R150 billion rand a year.

- 500 000 hawkers or table top vendors earning on average between R1 500 to R3 000 each a month in profit. Up to 60% of municipal fruit and vegetable market trade is from this sector and the kasi kos sector.
- 150 000 hair salons ranging from home backrooms to colourful corrugated iron dunusa (barebum) style sell hair pieces and stylings worth millions every weekend. R10 billion in stylings and cuts alone.
- 60 000 school mamas at township schools selling snacks and meals.
- And there are a multitude of other businesses in these sectors including:
 - Kasi building, renovations, gates, burglar guards, chrome gutters, etc
 - Services – plumbing, electricians, catering & event suppliers tent, toilet and chair hire
 - Alcohol – taverns & shebeens
 - Cultural – muti, livestock, sangoma, inyanga, unveilings, funerals
 - Rental / Property – backroom & spaza rental
 - Financial – mashonisa, stokvel, masicwabisane.

But, like the matrix, this trade and its scale is invisible to us. We don't see its gleaming corporate headquarter. We don't recognise its multitudes, as they are in a caravan on the side of a road, a pile of veggies on a crate, or a little chemist under a highway bridge. Yet in many ways our economy is being sustained and driven by this sector. Not only are these outlets and traders paying VAT on their substantial purchases, but they are employing people and bringing in household incomes on a massive scale. In most cases the average Rand circulates more often in a township informal economy than a formal one.

EUROSHOP 2020 – AHT Makes its Easy!

PARIS

The plug-in freezer/refrigerator that redefines economy and lifts product presentation to an innovative level.

PARIS also maximises your sales space by means of shelf inserts, which will further increase your revenues. PARIS – an extremely efficient all-rounder that can lay claim to prestigious excellence.

ATHENS – Future proof investments in Refrigeration and Freezing

Our overall philosophy is based on four pillars.

- Sustainability
- Energy Efficiency
- Innovation
- Maximum customer benefits

“WE COOL AND YOU SELL” Plug it in, refrigerate or freeze, and sell more – that’s our motto at AHT, which has been inspiring customers and boosting their business since 1983.

MANHATTAN - Food Retail

AHT has been the experienced expertise, product and service partner for leading supermarket chains and discounters throughout the world for decades.

The sustainability of our activity is visible in our daily work, our products, and our persistent development efforts. Thinking in a forward-looking manner.

In a globalized world of constant change, we as innovation leaders think it is important to act sustainably and in view to the future. It is our duty to set standards which the following generations can build upon – about environment aspects as well as the ability to finance our future.

The advantages are obvious: Product safety, lower running costs.

AHT showed a “HERO retro chest” at Euroshop that has been used successfully every day for over 20 years. AHT was already focused on energy efficiency at that time. Since then, the technology for the presentation and storage of refrigerated and frozen goods has been continuously improved through more efficient components and new control strategies. As a result, it is now possible to achieve a daily energy consumption of less than 4kWh even with units that have a net volume of 1000 litres and more.

AHT is making a clear statement in regard to the global climate discussion. The most efficient island freezers are those with the closed glass tops. We are seeing a massive drive towards the R290 self-contained units.

With this update that has been in use since 2019, we emphasize our expertise in energy efficiency. We have once again managed to reduce the energy consumption of the AHT chest freezer fleet by up to 20%. It makes us especially proud that we have achieved these savings and at the same time have also optimized product temperature safety in combination with our new defrosting concept. Thanks to this efficiency, with the update, we have managed to achieve the lowest energy consumption in the industry. By using eco-friendly propane, AHT refrigeration technology lets the environment breathe.

Energy efficiency & Cost savings are critical in every supermarket, but how does a store go about achieving concrete savings in the current climate?

Plug-in for cool sales success

AHT is the inventor of the plug-in installation: the revolutionary Plug & Chill concept makes AHT's refrigerated multideck cabinets and chest freezers the logical choice for supermarkets to buy.

Sustainable cost reduction

Thanks to the complete integration of all the refrigeration components, no additional installation costs are incurred. This ensures that AHT appliances are convenient and reduces the cost of developing and/or refurbishing supermarkets.

1998 to 2020 AHT is continuously expanding our position as a world leader – these principles guide us in everything we think and do!

AHT Cooling Systems GmbH has been operating successfully in the field of industrial cooling and freezing for more than 30 years. AHT's background of long-standing entrepreneurial tradition and our permanent focus on demand-oriented, market-driven innovation has led us to become an extremely successful global enterprise.

Bizerba redefining innovative retail solutions. Thee market-leading supplier of solutions for weighing technology, slicers and price labelling devices, established its subsidiary in South Africa in 2014. The theme of 'fresh produce' is particularly important in South African trade and amongst consumers. This raises the bar for modern weighing and cutting devices, and at the same time for industrial food processing.

CASE CLOSED

Energy Saving Solutions

Glacier Door Systems has introduced the Air Shield ('Close the Case') Glass Door retrofit solution for refrigerated supermarket display cases, as well as the Eco Leaf Replacement Glass Door for existing glass door freezer rooms and glass door freezer display cabinets. Both solutions guarantee energy-savings in an ever-increasing energy cost environment. Part of the well-established Universal Industries Group, Glacier has 26 years' experience and are acknowledged industry leaders in refrigeration door technology. Innovative and forward-thinking, the company is built on cutting-edge technology, technical expertise and a customer-centric approach.

Air Shield Glass Doors

Features and Benefits

- Double glazed glass doors with Argon gas fill for superior insulation.
- Glass durability and clarity with torsion bar for positive closing.
- Glass door heating option for high humidity environments.
- Glass doors available with hold open brackets and LED lighting options.
- Flex modelling means glass panels are customised to fit existing cabinets and are tailored to suit each store's specific environment.

A quick and easy energy-saving retrofit solution, Air Shield Glass Doors can be fitted to any existing open refrigeration case, saving up to 40% on energy consumption.

Note: The value proposal is based on R1.31 per kWh and 40% energy saving. These are averages based on our experience and can be validated per store.

The value benefit

- High-quality locally manufactured solutions featuring the latest energy-saving technology.
- Demonstrated good pay back periods can be expected.
- Customised solutions to suit your store.
- ISO 9001 accredited factory.
- Safety toughened glass in accordance with SABS/SANS certification.
- Flexible installation timing to offset any customer disruption.
- Financing options available.

You can trust a Glacier door

CASE CLOSED

Energy Saving Solutions

Eco Leaf Freezer Doors

Designed as a 'swop-out', energy-saving replacement glass door utilising 220V technology that eliminates the need for voltage-reducing capacitors. This results in an amperage reduction from 1.29A on the standard door to 0.46A (64%) with the replacement Eco Leaf Door.

The Eco Leaf door is 64% more efficient than the standard door. The value proposal is based on R1.31 per kWh and 64% energy saving. These are averages based on our experience and can be validated per store.

Up to 40% energy saving with our Close the Case Glass Doors

Ways to save

With energy costs rising and food retailers looking to improve the shopping environment for customers, Insulated Structures has developed an effective solution to reduce the cost of in-store refrigeration while enhancing the customer experience.

Insulated Structures doors are easy to retrofit on in-store cabinets to reduce the energy required to keep chilled foods at the correct temperature.

Meanwhile, customers are able to clearly see and access the products on offer. Reduced energy requirements means smaller refrigeration plant selection for new stores. These savings will offset the cost of the doors. Up to 40% reduction in refrigeration requirement has been achieved.

Benefits

- Reduced energy consumption
- Extended product shelf life
- Double glazed argon filled void for Better insulation
- Optimal product temperature
- Glass doors have optional mullion lights
- Handles included
- Up to 40% energy saving
- Solution for new cabinets or retro fitted on existing cabinets
- Doors are spring loaded
- Less cold air spillage - warmer aisles
- Proudly South African

Recycling

Old crates may be returned to Mpack Plastic Containers at the end of their 10–15 year life cycle. We have an on-site recycling facility where we recycle old products and use this recycled material to create new plastic products. This is how we are closing the loop and ensuring minimal natural resources are extracted from the Earth's surface.

Mpack Plastic Containers form part of Mpack Operations. There are two manufacturing plants; one in Brits, North West, and the other in Atlantis, Western Cape. Each plant is host to a 5500t Engel Duo machine, the largest of its kind in the southern hemisphere.
